

Advertisement

Wed Apr. 07 2010 1:27:25 PM

Bobby Orr's rookie jersey could fetch big bucks for Ontario man

The Canadian Press

One of only two known surviving 1966-1967 season Boston Bruins jerseys worn by then-rookie, Bobby Orr, is shown in a handout photo. The jersey expected to sell for as much as US$100,000 in a public auction to be conducted in Dallas, Texas and online by Heritage Auction Galleries on Apr 23, 2010. (THE CANADIAN PRESS/HERITAGE AUCTION GALLERIES)

A piece of Canadian hockey history is on the auction block and it has nothing to do with Sid the Kid or The Great One.

It's Bobby Orr's rookie jersey from his 1966-67 season with the Boston Bruins -- one of only two such jerseys still known to exist.

The native of Parry Sound, Ont., is remembered as one of the NHL's greatest and most creative defencemen.

His rookie jersey -- complete with the stick marks and patched-up holes -- is expected to fetch at least $100,000 at auction.

The jersey belongs to 58-year-old John Rows, of Kingston, Ont., whose uncle gave it to him as a teenager.

The live auction will be held April 23.

E-Mail Story Share

News	Ent.	Sports
Ontario won't come up with TTC funding deal by year end: McGuinty
Driver rushed to hospital after serious crash in Mississauga
Smoke-free restaurants may be keeping Torontonians out of hospital: study
Thousands bid farewell to latest Canadian soldier killed in Afghanistan
Teen killed in Mississauga crash
Conservatives clam up over 'third-party' allegations against Guergis
Ontario will consider adding 18 seats to legislature to match Commons: McGuinty
Canadian military man accused of 'sexting' US teen, driving to her home
Ontario's 1.6 per cent GDP in Q4 2009 best in Canada and U.S.
Toronto police corruption case to proceed after court declines to hear appeal

Advertisement

Earn AIR MILES® reward miles on purchases over $40 before tax.

CP24 Talk Shows

HOT PROPERTY

SEX MATTERS

LEDREW LIVE

WEBNATION

Click for more

CP24 Features

Holocaust Remembrance Day
Holocaust survivors share their stories and personal accounts.

'Harry Potter: The Exhibition'
The Ontario Science Centre pulls out all the stops to cast a spell to intrigue you beyond your imagination.

CP24 to broadcast Santa Claus Parade live
Santa's Workshop has a big new helper for the annual Santa Claus Parade.

CP24 Newsletter

CP24 is pleased to offer you a choice of three e-mail newsletters that will keep you up-to-date on breaking news, weather and all the latest developments in the GTA.

Sign up